Hi!

To whom it may concern

My name is Aleksandra, but friends call me Alexa. I am an aspiring Front-End Developer who dreams of becoming a Full-Stack developer one day. I am a fast learner and I am ready to face challenges that come with becoming a great software engineer.

I had been studying Computer Science at school, but I eventually left after a few semesters. I began to study on my own through online courses, platforms, and social media. I studied from YouTube, my favorite tech YouTubers are DevEd, Maximilian Schwarzmüller, Traversy Media, Javascript Mastery, and plenty of others that I learned from. I am a big fan of Lynda LinkedIn Online School and I completed multiple courses from it.

Why do I think I should get a chance? I consider myself a very reliable, patient, hard-working, decent, and communicative person. But what I value the most in myself is determination, strong will, and courage to not give up even when all seemed lost. From when I was 19, I had to take care of myself. I had a little help from my parents, so I understood what a life's wisdom and responsibility mean when you are on your own, and how important is self-discipline and belief in yourself. My life experiences made me tough, but also a compassionate person.

Why do I think I will be a great engineer that any company wishes to have? I had spent thousands of hours practicing coding. I started to learn how to code 4 years ago. In the beginning, I was lost. I practiced everything because I couldn't decide what I want to do. The outcome was that I knew a little bit of everything, but this approach did not set me on the right path to get a job. A few months ago I decided to pursue a career in Front-End, and later on in Full-Stack development. I know that engineering means spending hours on fixing bugs, learning new technologies, frameworks, and libraries that never stop growing, and struggling with typos and config issues that break the entire app. I know what I am signing up for, and I am ready to execute the best of me to do my job, not only correctly, but also with passion and satisfaction.

I am seeking to speak with you further about an opportunity I may receive from your company.

Best Regards,

Aleksandra Slomska
